Keymacro is a Windows command line utility that can be used to shorten the process of opening and closing of different files, like Excel, RTF, MS Office, PDF, etc. It allows you to add all the required information about the document, and it saves you from writing long filenames every time you open or close a document. You can use this tool to create macros for different functions: closing a file, opening a file, moving/copying/renaming, etc. The installation is fast, and it does not require any external components. It runs in the background, so you can concentrate on your work. Keymacro does not require administrator rights. How to use Keymacro: Simply create a macro that you want to use. This can be a shortcut that opens a file or a line that runs a command. You can also use Keymacro for copying text and data from a source and saving it to another destination. To create a macro in Keymacro, just select a command and add the required information about a file. To launch a macro, press the F3 key and start typing the name of the macro. This is the only way to start a macro. To close a document, select the file name, choose a new file name for the document or move it to the desired location. To close Excel 2007, select the file and press the F4 key. To close Excel 2010, press the F11 key. To open a file in a new window, press F5. Please note that Keymacro requires a command to run each time a file is opened or closed. For example, when a file is closed, you can launch another macro that asks you if you want to exit or save the changes. You can also save all the settings of Keymacro to a file and launch them later. Keymacro works with all modern versions of Microsoft Office. System requirements: Keymacro does not require any separate installation. Keymacro also has its own user guide that you can find here: Keymacro Features: - Easy to use - Supports all versions of Microsoft Office - User guide - Record macros - Close or save changes - Save settings to a file - Supports batch processing - Works with all modern versions of Microsoft Office - Comes with a 30-day money-back guarantee Keymacro 1d6a3396d6
