Below is a trivial example of what I want to achieve: class Outer { private class Nested: Outer { var initNested() { print("Nested initialised") } } var funcNested: () -> Void { return Nested.initNested } } How can I force the n->M1() to be exported as funcNested and not initNested? I'm using Swift 4.2. Thanks A: I couldn't find a way to export a method from a nested class. So I ended up overriding the initNested() method. class Outer { override init() { super.init() print("Outer initialised") } private class Nested: Outer { override init() { super.init() print("Nested initialised") } var funcNested: () -> Void { return super.funcNested } } var funcNested: () -> Void { print("Outer funcNested!") return super.funcNested
