A point in time in the event chain that is executed after.The Catholic Archdiocese of Los Angeles has agreed to a $50,000 settlement with a woman who says she was sexually abused as a child by a priest, according to the church and the woman. The woman, in her 40s, says the priest molested her and another girl from the parish when she was in the late 1980s and early 1990s. The woman's lawyer, Ben Meiselas, confirmed in an email to NBC News on Friday that the lawsuit was settled "without any admission of liability" by the archdiocese. He said the archdiocese "is thrilled to make this resolution." "It is a tribute to the dedication of those courageous individuals who have dedicated their lives to ensuring the protection of children in our parishes, schools and other institutions," the archdiocese said in a written statement. "The Archdiocese's legal counsel have repeatedly emphasized that the Archdiocese seeks no money from the Plaintiff, and that the Archdiocese as a matter of policy, and consistent with its commitment to the children of California, has never reached any cash settlements in any abuse cases, sexual or otherwise."
